

LOOKING WITHIN

The Rescuer

Peter Sanderson
Alameda, CA
LookingWithin.com
pjmask@sbcglobal.net

The Rescuer: The knight on his shining armor galloping on his powerful steed is on his way to rescue the damsel in distress.

There is a part deep within ourselves which is attracted to this tale and longs for such a rescue, whether we are woman or man.

The reality of spirit, though, is quite different.

Mother Mary, whose love is so profound and unconditional, has stated on many of my channels: Rescuing is Forbidden!

We want to rescue, mostly, because our hearts inspire us to do it. By being the observer we desire to help the ones in need. We think we have a glimpse of the solution and want to offer the answer.

Our real mission, though, is to remain the silent observer. It is to hold the space and allow the unfoldment of the lesson, or challenge, to be presented to the one who has to embrace it. We only can act if we are being asked.

Rescuing does not empower the chosen student. It only hinders his growth, and more has to be learned.

We have to honor the student's walk, give encouragement, applaud at each success knowing very well that there are no failures in the school of souls.

By NOT rescuing, not only do we empower the student, but we empower ourselves as well. Rescuing implies that we wish to be rescued also.

To be impeccable is to be present and allow what has been designed by spirit to unfold for both the student and the witness.

So, let's stand still, and with our hearts filled with loving, let Spirit orchestrate his own destiny. Then, let's watch.

Remember, be gentle with yourselves and let peace be with you.

